The Wolf ★★★★★ 5.0/5

May 25th 2013 | 3 Comments | Category: Suspense Stories , Thriller Stories | Author: Peter Hartke | 345 views

Gor moved slowly, his powerful haunches flexing as he crept low to the ground. His ears flattened back against his massive head as he paused in the shadows, raising his nose and taking scent of the air. A low deep ...

“How far is it ... to get there?”

“Eh? ‘Bout two days. Three days if it gets too hot.”

Two days? That would really cut my arrival in time to see the comet very finely. But I had no choice. I hoped that I could arrange some quick transport once I got to Fleming’s Range.

We set off, moving towards a now golden sunrise. As the sun moved skyward and the heat quickly dried the filmy dew, I saw traces of what Snowy had described earlier. On a few occasions we came across scorched remnants of animals: dingos, kangaroos, even some goannas. Snowy showed me the trail he was tracking, a
